SHORT GROUP REFLECTION:

Working together in this group was not easy the first time. Everyone's kind of quiet and shy; nobody talks unless someone else does, and everyone has different personalities, which is very normal in a group. During the planning of the roleplay, as organizing a Valentine's Day Event, surprisingly, it was smooth. Everyone participated when someone stood up to lead the group in doing the things they should do, how they should do it, when they should shoot it, and so on. Everyone worked as one. With that, the challenge was just aligning everyone's schedules. There was a sudden emergency: one group member was in the hospital due to her mother's condition, which delayed the group's initial plan to do the roleplay. However, the team members were very gracious and understanding of the situation and rescheduled the shoot to everyone's availability. This strengthened the relationship among the group members and explained the group's chemistry. No pressure, no competition, just understanding and grace. Therefore, throughout this journey of collaborating, we learned that teamwork makes the dream work. It's really true that if everyone comes together as one, success happens. Despite the differences, it was never an excuse to not participate and do your best. In fact, the differences were what made it turn out smoothly. One's weakness is another one's strength.
